MILDRED CAPRON

Mildred Capron has sought knowledge in many parts of the world. But she has retained a very special place in her affections for her hills of home . . . Wyoming. Now she has filmed Wyoming in color—not glamorizing the West, but showing it as it is, exciting and beautiful, its business and its pleasures, its blizzards and its ruggedness, as only a person who belongs to it can do.

Whether it be a wild horse roundup, the Oregon trail, cowboys and Indians, a pack trip into the wilderness area of the Wind River Mountains, ranching, rodeos, the Devil's Tower, prairie dogs, rock chucks, antelope, sage grouse, trumpeter swans, an Arapaho Wolf Dance, gold rush towns, wild flowers, minerals, golden trout that fishermen dream of—Mildred Capron has filmed them all—"Sky High in Wyoming".

Mildred Capron has carved a career in the world of documentary film productions that many may well envy, accepting danger and discomfort as the price of her unusual experiences. An Easterner by birth, she lived in China for 14 years and has been twice around the globe. Now she calls Wyoming "home" and the adoption has been mutual. She likes the open spaces "where there is room for the spirit". Audiences admire her warm personality on the lecture platform, her delightful sense of humor, and illuminating narration. It is readily understandable that Mildred Capron is universally acknowledged today as a top-ranking film-lecturer and photographer and is included in "Who's Who of American Women."
